Red Bank Christmas Festival 2016 Vendor Rules

Red Bank Christmas Festival (RBCF) encourages artists, craftsmen, growers and creative individuals to take advantage of an opportunity to share their creations in a family friendly environment. The RBCF committee will screen all applicants and reserves the right to approve or deny any applicant.

The RBCF is NOT a flea market. The Festival Committee will not allow any works commonly associated with those venues.

To allow for variety among all vendors, including food & beverage vendors; RBCF will restrict the number of vendors offering similar items. If a vendor has a variety of items, selling certain items may be prohibited based on vendors already approved. We have opened a limited amount of booth spaces to some commercial vendors this year.

- All products must meet basic expectations of product life, function and safety.

Pipes and other Paraphernalia: The RBCF prohibits the sale or advertisement for sale of any drug paraphernalia. This specifically includes the sale of any pipes made of any material. Absolutely no business offering title loans, payday advances or check cashing services will be approved as a vendor.

AGRICULTURE RULES

The mission of the RBCF includes the creation of opportunities for local growers to sell their products, to provide the buying public with the freshest, highest quality produce available, and to enforce a truth in advertising policy, making sure that individual growing practices meet the public perception what is being sold. Therefore, if seller of farm products did not personally create the products they cannot be sold in this venue.

PRODUCT LABELING

Certified Organically Grown: Farmers enrolled in an organic certification program produce all of the produce, flowers and plants available from the Festival with this label. Certification of a farmer usually entails:

- Yearly third-party verification inspections of growers by trained inspectors to ensure absolute adherence to the guidelines of the certification organization;
- Development of a "Farm Plan", which addresses the use of strategies and technologies for long-term improvements to the soil;
- Laboratory testing of soil and plant tissues for persistent pesticide residues.
- Some states in our area offer their own certification programs. Labeling designating "certified organic" must denote the governing body of the certification.

Sustainably Grown: Does not condone or permit the use of synthetically compounded pesticides or fertilizers which have been derived either from or through the use of petrochemicals; Allows the use of botanically derived pesticides and naturally occurring fertilizers – such as animal manures, powdered minerals and botanical extracts. Sustainable farmers utilize as much on-farm derived inputs as economically possible; generally prioritizes soil-building strategies to provide a long-term basis for soil fertility and tilt.

The use of biologic pest control, such as providing habitat for beneficial insects or direct introduction of same, is regarded as more a sustainable method of pest control than is the use of botanically derived pesticides. Locally Grown (conventional): Products carrying this label are grown through farming practices and regulations promulgated by the United States Department of Agriculture. Those regulations allow the use of a number of synthetically derived pesticides, herbicides, fungicides and fertilizers. These growers may also use botanically derived pesticides and naturally occurring fertilizers. These products were grown locally and by the person selling the product.

PLANTS

No living plants are to be sold. See Agriculture rules.

SERVICES

Services such as chair massage, psychic readings, portrait sketches, etc. are acceptable. If a service requires a license, it is the vendor's responsibility to provide approved license and compliance with all regulations of said license before set-up.

ALL VENDORS:

Vendors are expected to maintain their own insurance for their booth and products.

RBCF accepts NO liability for damage, theft or injuries occurring within the vendor's booth space.

Vendors are responsible for all sales tax to the extent of the law.

Nonprofits and/or churches selected must offer either services and/or products of which profits go back into that organization.

Booth space will be assigned based on first come, first served and/or the need for electricity.

Each vendor is expected to have read and understood these guidelines upon applying for booth space.
